It is a Development Partner of Advocates for International Development and a Member of OECD's International Network on Financial Education. They also received the 10th M.R. Pai Memorial Award in September 2014 for their outstanding work. Thus, DES SNFLC in association with Moneylife Foundation organised One Day Workshop on 'Right to Information' on 10th December, 2018 to mark International Human Rights Day. This workshop was organised for the members of Legal Research Cell, NSS and Moot Court Society of DES SNFLC. In the workshop an overview about the RTI Act was given by Mr. Shailesh Gandhi, Former Central Information Commissioner. Dr. Anupam Saraph, Trustee, Moneylife Foundation conducted session on Sec. 4 and how it would help better governance, followed by live examples of how people have used RTI to empower themselves and RTI Filing Demo given by Ms. Vinita Deshmukh Senior Journalist, RTI columnist & activist.

The workshops began with the participants introducing themselves and talking about their expectations from the one-day events. Most of them had come to the workshops with the expectation of learning about right to information, its value and importance and the key provisions of the Right to Information Act 2005. The introductory session explained the overall purpose and specific objectives behind organizing the workshop. It is important that all citizens of India are aware of it. NGOs plays an important role in spreading awareness about RTI Act at the grassroots. He urged the participants to become fully aware about the key provisions of the Act, so that they in turn can educate others. After this, speaker explained in brief the role that her organization had played in advocating for a good RTI Act in India and the training programs that it is undertaking for government officials and for civil society throughout the country.

Introduction to Right to Information and its Value

Mention of the historical evolution of the RTI Act in India. The speaker drew up a linkage between RTI and its relevance for having good governance. The key attributes of good governance include:

- Transparency

- Responsibility
- Accountability
- Participation and
- Responsiveness to the needs of the people

In order to ensure good governance one of the pre-requisites is the right of citizens to have access to government held information. Accessing information as a matter of right is called Right to Information. The Right to Information is a fundamental right under the Constitution of India. It is a part of Article 21, which states that information is necessary for protection of the right to life and liberty. According to Article 19(1)(a) information is necessary to form and express opinions, dissent or support on any matter.

Right to Information Act 2005

In this session, the speakers explained the main provisions of the RTI Act in details. The presentation was substantiated by real life examples and case studies on how people have accessed information under existing state RTI laws.

In order to obtain information under this Act, citizens must make a request in writing or through electronic means in English or Hindi along with an application fee of Rs.10 to the PIO. If no action is taken on application for 30 days, then it will be deemed refusal.

Appeals Mechanism: In case the information asked for is not provided or the fees charged are unreasonable, the person who has asked for the information can appeal to the departmental appellate authority. The first appeal can be made to the officer immediately senior to the PIO in the concerned public authority. This can be done within 30 days from the date of the refusal letter. If the decision of the first appellate authority is upheld then the requestor can appeal to the State Information Commission.

State Information Commission

The Act establishes a State Information Commission (SIC) in all the states. The SIC has been given broad powers to hear appeals and have also been tasked with regular monitoring of the law (including production of annual reports). The Commission can make any order required to bring about compliance with the law, including ordering release of documents, appointment of PIOs and publication of specified information.
